Headline:
Fog patches Tuesday evening. Generally cloudy on Wednesday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Fog patches are likely to form this evening, but these likely to become more isolated later in the night as cloud generally increases from the northwest. Some patchy frost also likely ahead of the cloud. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Wednesday:
Any remaining fog should clear to leave generally cloudy conditions on Wednesday with the odd spot of rain possible. Outbreaks of rain moving south should reach Norfolk by midnight. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Thursday colder with blustery coastal showers. Into Friday conditions turning very unsettled with rain, then showers and strong winds. These conditions continue into Saturday, and feeling cold.
